The Parker boys and a number of others are leaving today to find winter quarters for their stock.

Bob Henson is opening up a butcher shop at Rosedale, in the Drumheller Valley.

The Armada branch of the Bank of Hamilton will be open in future on Monday and Thursday only, and will be operated under the jurisdiction of the Lomond branch.

"Lest we forget" what has been and lose hope on what might come again, Mr. St. John has posted a lonely stock of 1919 wheat some three feet long right at the wicket where you enquire as to your constantly shrinking bank balance.

G. F. Armstrong's son and family of Kensal, N. Dakota, is here on a visit, making the trip up by motor.

The government has announced its program for the relief of the feed situation. THE LAST GREAT ADVENTURE

The Lomond Agricultural Society Invites and Expects You to Turn in and Make This Year's Fair a Success, Even in Spite of the Weather Man's Persistent Frown.

Lomond's big fair on Thursday of next week, might well be cited as the last great adventure in 1919 in the realms of public entertainment. The stock and inside exhibits promise to rival that of previous years and in the line of sports there is apt to be some lively competition. The farmers' novelty horse race has a number of local prospects. The free-for-all is bringing Champion and Vulcan horses. The ball games will up to snuff, Enchant being one of the visiting teams.

The Lomond Band will provide music on the grounds.

Don't forget the big dance in the I.O.O.F. Hall at night.

THAT $2000.00 ... BONUS

In view of the fact that the local Great War Veterans are about to organize, we take pleasure in publishing the following article, handed us some time ago by the contributor, Mr. Renton. Furthermore, we believe the boys should get the cash bonus being asked for.

Calgary, May 18th., 1919.

It seems rather a strange and rather inconsistent that a returned citizen should have to express his view in regard to the all engrossing topic of the $2,000 bonus.

Why are the politicians so silent about it? The reason is not far to seek. The one is waiting to see how the "cat will jump". Take it from me that the cat will make a big jump, and when this acrobatic feat does take place, the reputation of many politicians will be in the discard.

The kernel of this bonus idea may be found in the original resolution, "the necessity of providing some system of bonus payments which will equalize the earnings of the members of the expeditionary forces with what they could have earned had they remained civilians. Is not this the best investment for Canada? The money will be spent in Canada, will be repaid by many of the participants of this bonus, and will render our beloved Dominion a better and greater Canada. Take the antithesis of this, and it is brought very forcibly to my mind when I think of what a young Canadian soldier said to me the first time we were on leave in London. We saw a veteran of previous wars with his breast emblazoned with color—his whole physique bearing impress of fighting for the Motherland. This man was selling matches outside Victoria station London. The young soldier remarked, "My God, sergeant have we got to come to this?" Is Canada prepared and anxious to have almshouses? Is she prepared to find that the hard-fought fields of St. Julien, the Somme, and Passchendaele have been in vain, except to fill the pockets of a few? We ask each other now, "Why did we go?", and yet, I believe I am right in saying that despite this disinterest in our future, we would go again.

Some few, and among them Gen. Griesbach, suggest that Canada cannot bear such a burden. Let me say, without fear of contradiction, that these do not know, and are not conversant with Britain's greatness. Is it not the National debt of Britain that has made her such a power? Did she not get credit to carry on the war, and give credit to her Allies? And what is her national debt now? The National Debt is really the backbone of Britain. No one over there complains of this debt, because they know that the child unborn will pay its share. The idea of a heavy taxation to be borne by the present generation is absurd. It is really the future generation that is going to reap the benefit of our services in France, and it is to the future generation that we must look for the payment for services rendered.

It is a huge joke on the part of some officers to state that such a plan would be to commercialize their services. These men today are holding down offices from which they would be dismissed if they raised their hand or uttered a word in favor of a project of general benefit. In other words, they refuse to go into the front line, and are branded as—

While the politicians are not at all interested, let me warn them that their constituents are, and it looks to me, and I am a close observer of the situation in this Province, that this matter may be made a direct issue to the people, and, if so, the men the men who have betrayed the trust of the men who fought for them, will be relegated to that bourne from which there is no return. I am not going to touch on the equality of pensions, but it is sufficient to say that no man except General Griesbach has ever had the courage, or, to put it more correctly, the impudence, to doubt the equality of pensions is the only system, and the only one which Canada will stand for.

To the disinterested might I say, take the other side of the story. If St. Julien had not been won, if the Somme, and other battlefields had not resulted in our favor, the dollar would not have its market price today. Think this matter and say every time you meet a returned man, "Is this man, to whom we owe such a great debt amply repaid for the services rendered?" Leave out the commercialization; that is all camouflage. Many a man has his profession to get back to, but many another man has neither trade, house nor calling, but, God knows he did his duty. I do not believe in applause for doing duty, but I am a great advocate for such men to be put in statu quo.

Since writing the foregoing, I see that a pronouncement adverse to the bonus has been made by no less a personage than Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance. It does not in the slightest amend what I have said, but for the benefit of those who might be impressed with this said pronouncement as being taken seriously by the men who advocate it, I am inclined to go into rather greater detail in the latter half of this article.

The scheme as outlined by Major Eaton, M.L.A., was carefully thought out, and it was borne in on him because no scheme had been suggested which RECONSTRUCTION is the order of the day. If you have formed the Savings habit you are prepared to meet its opportunities; if not, reconstruct your methods and begin today. We have a Savings Department at every Branch.

LOMOND, ALBERTA, FRIDAY, JULY 25. 1919

THIS YEAR'S FAIR UPHOLDS STANDARD

Lomond's third annual fair, held on Thursday in spite of the elements, was indeed something worth while. The exhibits, while held back considerably by the drouth, were of sufficient number and caliber to make the judging interesting. The ladies made a great hit in the hall and upheld the reputation of previous years. The home-cooking was superb—we know whereof we speak—and there was even a bottle of pretty good wine on the shelves.

The G.W.V.A. had an interesting exhibit of war trophies which attracted a good deal of attention.

There were a good many horses in the ring, and while they were generally of an excellent type, they lacked the show-ring condition which is only possible to achieve by the continuous feeding of good plump oats.

The cattle and poultry exhibits were not as numerous as they should have been, and ditto for the pigs.

The ball games were good. The teams were a little late in getting lined up, as the cloudy morning held back Bassano from making an early start. Manager Swain won the bye for Lomond, so it was Enchant and Bassano for it. Enchant had a good line-up but Bassano was too snappy for them as well as for Lomond in the finals. We must say that the home boys held them down pretty tight, but did not get very much past Bassano's perfect field work. Davis of Enchant pitched for Lomond.

There were five entries in the free-for-all race and contest was a tight heat, between Hansen's Slip-along and Johnson's Chinook, the purse going to those horses respectively. The novelty race drew six entries, Jay Little's horse drew first money and McLean's horse drew second. The ladies' harness hitch and drive half mile created no end of excitement. Jessie Newton got away to the harness and hitch but Mrs. Lacquement's horse beat her to it on the track.

Even Jas. McNaughton said it was a good fair. Mr. Fidler, the municipal inspector, stayed over for the day, and complimented the Lomond Band on their efforts towards the success of the day. Mr. Gaudin of Stettler judged the horses and Mr. Wilson of Edmonton judged the cattle.

The Vets did a rushing business at their refreshment booth.

The dance in the hall at night was both enjoyable and successful financially. The Lomond Orchestra provided the music.

THE MUNICIPAL DISTRICT AFFAIRS IN A TANGLE

The Municipal District of Clifton is shy four councillors, Porter Noyes having resigned through moving out of the district. Jim Marshall pulled out to give his constituents a chance to get some malleable material, while Hanna and Orr and Hanna take the lack of confidence vote engineered by the ratepayers' investigation committee at the special meeting held in the hall on Wednesday afternoon. The south divisions were heavily represented and a good deal of heckling kept in the meeting till after six o'clock. Mr. Fidler tried to lead them into the light but they would not be led. What will be the final outcome remains with the department and the ratepayers.

GEORGE SAYS IT CAN BE DONE

George Hoadely has a head both literally and metaphorically. Some politicians have the literal side of the proposition in a physical sense only, while once in a lifetime you run across a politician that can unearth something worth while of his own sweet will and accord.

George leads a lonesome company of opposition members in the Alberta legislature, but even that has not blinded him to the sins of omission on the part of his brothers of like proclivities in higher spheres of conservatism.

It appears that the South Alberta Irrigation or the Canada Land and Irrigation Company as it is now called, has received considerable financial assistance from the Canadian Government and in return has promised to start out and accomplish certain things which they are several years short of accomplishing. The Canada Land and Irrigation Company has already constructed main ditches that would serve a large territory in this much discussed arid section of Alberta. They also about completed the filling of the great reservoir Lake McGregor—named after J. B. McGregor who grows prize cattle. They have not prepared any great area of their own land for water privileges, and rather than allow this immense expenditure of capital to lie idle George says that the Government should force the Irrigation people's hand and compel them to construct laterals this fall and supply water to all the country tributary to their water levels in the spring of 1920.

What do you think of this?

Here is what the honorable gentleman suggests. He would advise the immediate calling of all U.F.A. locals, all municipal organizations, all boards of trade and the Retlaw Lomond Utilities Board in the bargain, and engineer an imposing demand upon the Alberta Government to take the matter to Ottawa and demand the Dominion Government to foreclose their concessions to the irrigation company unless such a policy is not immediately carried out.

To THE PRESS this appears to be getting down to brass tacks.

NOTES

A shower a week like that of Wednesday morning from now till November would restore a good bit of confidence in this neck of the woods.

o o o

It is said that Russian thistles when cut green make excellent hay. Another couple of showers and the natives will have plenty of material to experiment on.

o o o

If we can only get enough rain to start the grass, there would not be such an awful call for free freight hay this fall.

o o o

THE PRESS thinks that friend Hoadley's solution of irrigation in this district is O.K., but what we would like to know is by what right any government of ours financially backs up what is essentially a private enterprise with public funds. It may be constitutional and all that, but to us its mighty poor politics.

o o o

When we see these car loads of drummers driving through town week after week, one cannot help but feel that our present system of merchandizing is very wasteful and expensive. The present competitive system of merchandising must either be re-organized on a more economic basis or eventually go by the boards and be replaced by the sweep of co-operative trading. The trend of public opinion is pointing that way.

o o o

Talking about extravagance systemized, just look at all the governmental organizations we have in Canada to govern a measly little eight millions of a population. Each province is a little principality unto itself. As an illustration, each of the nine provinces has an educational department with a standard entirely different from any other province. Now, would it not be better for all Canadian children to be educated under one centralized department and under a standardized curriculum? Another illustration—practically every province in Canada has enacted prohibition legislation, but the traffic still thrives—we ignore the special war measure—by hiding behind the skirts of some ancient inter-provincial trade clause. Why allow the will of the people to suffer prostitution through a mere technicality?

o o o

Speaking of extravagance and such like, we would just to draw your attention to the fact that the cost of living in Alberta is about the lowest of any place in Canada. This is but scant consolation to those who have had their crops burned out for the past two and three years.

The Alberta Government is not only arranging to provide hay for distribution in the arid districts, but is also contemplating the regulation of hay prices.

o o o

How does your dollar stand?

BOW CITY

On Friday, July 25th. the Ladies of Eyremore tendered a banquet to the returned soldiers and their relatives. This was followed by an address by George Hoadly M.L.A., a play was given by the U-NEED-US Club, and a dance was held after.

The Bhdquet which began at seven was as large an affair as could be given in our hall. Plates were set for sixty but about six failed to be present including two soldiers. Of course several soldiers were unable to come owing to the distance and occupations, and some sent very kind answers with their regrets. Wherever possible the parents or two intimate friends of the absent soldiers were asked to represent them at the banquet. And it was gratifying to know that nearly all the homes in the neighborhood was represented either at the table or in the waiting on the guests. It is an index to the patriotism of the people.

The Ladies of Eyremore certainly excelled themselves in the very tastefully arranged spread provided. It was a continuance of the good work they have done in the sending of boxes of dainties to the soldier boys when overseas. Several eulogistic comments have been made on the banquet by those who know how to appreciate such entertainments.

A few toasts were given and these were brief and generally to the point, and enjoyed by all. Especially acceptable was the toast to 'Our Fallen Hero' (Corp. S. C. Westgate) In the absence of R. Gordon who was to have given the toast, Gunner A. Scroggie very fittingly spoke of Our Hero both in reference to his private life and his career as a soldier. The response, a silent moment standing, was thoughtfully given in memory of him and his ideal. The toast list is as follows.

"Our King"
Mr. Hoadly M.L.A. National Anthem
"Our Fallen Hero"
R. Gordon Silence
"The Allies"

U-NEED-US Club

Then the hall was cleared and a large number enjoyed the dance until after the rain began. The rain played havoc with several cars and some of them could not go home till long past morning.

During the program an appeal was made in behalf of the French Relief for devastated regions. The response was generous and reached to $53. this with the $100. voted from the Red Cross funds will make some destitute people happy over there.

The expenses of the banquet are being met by U-NEED-US Club which was organized some time ago with that as its chief object. This club of young ladies has given several entertainments and these little plays are very enjoyable and have been nicely acted. We hope that the work will not stop for still the motto and title can be applied to all who can help and entertain.

Hoadley Speaks on Irrigation at Bow City

A meeting was held in the Bow City Hall on Saturday afternoon, July 26th, at 2.30 which was well attended by the farmers of the locality to hear an address by George Hoadley, M.L.A., on the vital subject of irrigation. Mr. Hoadley left no room in his hearers to doubt the necessity of irrigation in this dry area of country and as a result a petition to the Dominion Government was drawn up and signed by all present urgently requesting a test of soil to prove its adaptability and also a preliminary survey to determine the possibilities and best means of securing a water supply and its necessary distribution. Mr. C. P. Calvert acted as chairman of the meeting and Mr. Charles Lee as secretary.

Travers Sports

Lomond freely patronized the sports at Travers on Peace Day. The ball team was slated to play in a three-cornered contest with Travers and Enchant for the hundred dollar purse. It appears that a draw was taken without a representative of the Lomond club being present or notified when the draw was to take place. Our boys declined to play unless a draw was made on the diamond the day of the sports, so the committee shut them out and announced and played a double header with Enchant. It is regrettable that this mix-up should have happened. It is bound to breed discord and enmity between factions in the two towns, and it was hardly a fitting attitude in which to undertake the celebration of the world's peace. Lomond was not altogether blameless. The boys should have been on the grounds and ready to play right on the scheduled time, and then again Travers hardly played fair with those who paid at the gate by shutting out the Lomond team.

The first game between Enchant and Travers was pretty much easy money for Travers up to the last innings, when Enchant found the pitcher's ball and batted in eight runs, thereby gaining a winning lead. The second game was pretty much of a farce from the spectator's point of view.

The smaller sports were all keenly contested and the novelty potato race along with the nail driving contest provided good betting material for those inclined to gamble. The greasy pole refused to be "clumb." The sickly expressions of the exasperated aspirants was exceedingly funny. Army gymnastics took the flag off the top and boys deserved the division of the purse.

An event not advertised created the most stir and excitement of the day. If it had been staged within the ropes it would have rivalled the Willard-Dempsey bout.

Grade Completed on West Side of Valley Trail

Quoting the Vulcan Advocate—

The grading job on the west valley Lomond road was completed on Tuesday night and the same is now ready for travel, giving a completely graded road all the way from Vulcan to Lomond. It is hardly in good condition at present but a little rain will put it in good shape. This finishes one of the big grading jobs in this part of the country and is said to be the longest grade and biggest cut between Calgary and Lethbridge. Thirty-two to forty-four head of horses were continuously on the job for over two weeks, making the cut which is a mile and forty rods in length, and the job was finished in a little over three weeks at a cost of over $500.00 less than was estimated. One cut of 35 feet was made and the average cut is 10 feet. Where the road comes out of the valley from the bottom of the coulee it is 90 feet high and has an average width of 28 feet with 32 feet at the turns, thus allowing plenty of room for passing vehicles with no grades in its entire length. This finishes a job that has long been a long-felt want and the municipality is to be congratulated upon its decision to complete it at this particular time. A good rain now is all that is required to put the same in first class condition for all kinds of travel.

All ratepayers on the job have signed a contract to write off their taxes as a first charge against their labor.

NOTES

"Do Not Yield to Misfortune" is a very good motto for we unfortunates to keep ever before us while we are fighting thru the adversities of nature and holding out with the hope that some day a bountiful return will reward us for our efforts. The realization of circumstances are seldom as hard as the anticipation. Times will be trying, no doubt, but there usually is some solution. Of course, one can't sit back in a chair and expect opportunity to look him up. We must be on the job all the time!

Irrigation to farmers in this part of Southern Alberta is a very serious matter of business. It is now time that we counted the cost, heavy and all as it may seem, and weigh it against the probable chances of a successful business venture. Whether we can afford to gamble against the chances of dry weather or whether we would prefer to be reasonably secured from the prospects of drouth is the sole basis of argument. THE PRESS believes that irrigation is the right course to pursue. The bonds would interest a large amount of outside capital and where capital is invested there is always a follow-up of various other interests. This money would be circulated throughout the country in the medium of wages and that in itself would be a guarantee of prosperity till such time as results could be expected from irrigation itself. Another phase suggested to us and one well worth consideration, is the mere fact of a water supply for man and beast. A good half of the people are now hauling their water supply and a good many of these people have already spent from five to fifteen hundred dollars in drilling wells. Irrigation to these people even without the privilege of watering the land would be a matter of economy and sound business.

This is no political dodge, and if it was it would be worth taking a chance on.

Just remember that the sale value of improved land under irrigation in Alberta is around a hundred dollars an acre. How does this line up against that sixteen hundred dollar construction obligation.

If the Forestry Branch had taken up prairie tree planting from the view point of garden protection there might have been more interest taken in the proposition. This year demonstrates that where snow is held on the ground by trees a good garden can be grown even in a dry year.

The Vulcan Advocate gives THE PRESS a dig for exhibiting a faint heart over the stress of circumstances, but says nothing in particular about Vulcan cancelling their agricultural fair. A town and district that can support a professional ball team should be able to pull off a fair even when crops go slack for a year or two.

The Frank Brown Company, Ltd.

had dealt with the problem of the future of the returned soldier upon a democratic basis. You will observe that the $2000.00 bonus scheme treats both officers and men alike, service only determining the category.

The four questions which afford ground for enquiry are these:

1. What is the necessity for such a project?
2. Who is going to benefit?
3. How much is it going to cost?
4. Where is the money coming from?

Firstly, we hear of all kinds of memorial halls. I have never expressed my opposition to such projects, but I do think that the finest memorial that any country could possibly place for the magnificent services rendered would be to adequately look after the mothers, the wives and kiddies of our comrades who lie in Flanders, and, furthermore, to see that adequate recognition is given to those who come back to take up the broken threads and take that place in civilian life to which they are entitled.

I do not wish to dilate upon financial sacrifices, as many are wicked enough to insinuate that many of the men who stopped the Hun at St. Julien and Festubert did so for $1.10 a day. If so, it was mighty cheap hiring. (No fair wage officer.) I do grant you that early in 1914 there was an aftermath from the prodigal spending of 1911 and succeeding years. This depression soon disappeared with the advent of the war, and the men who enlisted did not participate as those who remained behind. It is perfectly true, however, that many sacrificed everything at the call of country, and have come back to find that their small businesses, farms, etc., in which they had sunk the savings of a lifetime, cannot possibly be carried on. For this reason, is not the war gratuity justified?

Secondly, who is going to benefit? This the man in the street can answer as well as I.

Thirdly, how much is it going to cost? This is a small matter that I am not inclined to concern myself about. I am not an actuary, but I should imagine that between eight and nine million dollars would carry out the project. The cost of the matter can easily be off-set when we consider that the commercial and industrial life of Canada would benefit in every possible way, and we would not have the stigma of seeing so many unemployed going about our streets.

The fourth question! This seems to be the question that interests most people—where is the money going to come from? The last four years, however, have been years of big things—big armies, big men and big women. Granted that the national debt of Canada at the outbreak of the war was three hundred million, and conceding that five hundred million is still required to clean off the expenditure of the war, and taking twenty-three billion dollars as the amount of our national debt right today, I still am not dismayed at the prospect. I shall, however, say without fear of contradiction that twelve months ago today we were in the dark days when the Hun was threatening the channel ports of France and was within an ace of driving a wedge into the allies. Would Canada have stood aside and said "We cannot afford to carry on this war further." Did she not say "To the last dollar and the last man." If again the war had continued for only one year more, would we have been on the verge of bankruptcy? Nothing doing! If Canada could have raised without difficulty all kinds of money to carry on the war, cannot Canada, with her natural resources, her vast forests, mines, and raw prairies, carry on to attain that superiority among nations which she claims at the Peace Table? Can she refuse the mite of $2000 to the man who has made it possible for Canada to reap the 1919 crop? Europe will require Canada's crop for many years to come.

In conclusion, as I indicated in my opening paragraph, the soldiers stand in an embarrassing position, creating a project under which they and their comrades' dependents are the proposed beneficiaries. It is wonderful to know how the returned man is being worked up to fever pitch in regard to this matter, and I say sincerely that I welcome the words of Sir Thomas White, as we now know where we stand, and where he stands. We—the men who sent him to power—challenge him and his associates to come right back to the country making this question a direct issue. If ye break faith, we shall not sleep, tho' poppies grow in Flanders fields. In the words of Pat Burns, I shall close, "By your example you have committed us to a duty of gratitude which we will ever find difficult to adequately repay."

Yours truly,
J. R. Renton,
28th. Batt. C.E.F.

VETERANS CLEAN OUT PROFITEER

It is said that in Medicine Hat on Peace Day the returned soldiers raided a large green house and tore it to pieces. The owner had been dumping hot house tomatoes in the river rather than supply the trade at a figure so it would be possible to retail them under forty cents a pound.
